She will generally contrive, however, that none of her weapons of attack shall be so damaging as her praise. She will allow that her enemy is beautiful—beautiful as a tigress—but she will affirm that she is wicked; she will admit that she is amusing, but she will declare her to be ill natured; if she calls her innocent, she also calls her silly; and if she praises her as true-hearted and trustworthy, she stigmatizes her as unsympathetic and uninteresting. The Pall Mall Gazette gives some noteworthy statistics in regard to the increase of drunkenness—or at least of arrests for drunkenness—in London of late years. Ten years ago the number of persons arrested for being drunk and disorderly was 21,625, while last year it had increased to 33,892, or by nearly 57 per cent. The increase is especially remarkable in the case of women. Of the total number of persons arrested for these offenses during the year 1879, not less than 15.612 were women, or half as many again as were arrested in the year 1879, when the number was 10,378. There is a very curious feature in the nature of these returns which, perhaps, will recall some of the incidents in M. Zola's "L'Assommoir"—for why should M. Zola have selected laundresses for his heroines, if the same facts were not rife in Paris as in London? Of the $1,385 persons taken into custody last year, 36,920 were returned as having "no occupation," while the remaining 44,465 fell under some eighty different occupations. By far the largest number of any one classes whose occupation was particularly specified were laundresses. Of 3,392 women thus employ ed who came before the magistrates last year, 2,286 were arrested for ed who came before the magistrates last year, 2,286 were arrested for d unkenness, 269 for larceny, 145 for 1 mple assaults and 42 for assaults upon the police. The statistics show that laundresses committed more assaults than either soldiers or sailors. The Pall Mall Gazette does not specify the reasons given for these assaults, or say whether or not the most of them were committed upon delinquent clients. In one of his stories Captain clients. In one of his stories Captain Marryat makes one of his sailors remark that probably it is the amount of water they see when aboard that makes them extremely avid of grog when they find themselves on shore, and in one of his lectures Professor Huxley has "cribbed" from Marryat in regard to this matter, explaining the fact of Noah's inebriety on his sudden landing from the ark by saying that "he was probably disgusted with that "he was probably disgusted with the amount of water that he had recently seen around him." There is no doubt—at least in a formulating soul content with a few facts—that some reason of the same sort should explain the drunkenness of English laundresses,

What is meant by heresy but misleading men? A man comes into a pulpit with a sermon that is yellow with age, and drowses along about preordination, elections, perseverance of saints, and falling from grace. There is but one point of joy in the whole sermon of such a man. It is when he says "Amen." while experiences of the action of divine grace in the soul. The substitu-tion of decorum for real feeling and the missifunian of taste for conscience, are he substitution of heresy in the lower walks of men's life. There can be in the economy of the gospel. The Corinthian church furnishes a striking illustration of the substitution of real feeling in an educated and refined comcounity, where even at the Lord's support they celebrate it with such joviality that the apostle had to tell them that they must not get drunk. We had better far have the most tumaltuous levity than decorous stupidity.

I do not make a plea for all sorts of ulgarity and low expressions. Let very man express the stirrings of the loly Ghost within him, but let him do t in the language in which he was bern. David before the ark, dancing, was far more commendable than Mi-thael sitting in the window playing pro-

What Preachers Should Preach. The danger for America Besev.
The danger for America is that the pulpit shall be degraded even to a lower level if the preachers do not bring and give the very best they have, know and give the very best they have, know and believe to the people. "Preach as if you were preaching to archangels." That was an injunction of the late Mr. Weiss, and his obedience to his own injunction gave to his sermons the life and power which quicken to this day every hearer of them. Men may make other limitations to the doctrine of human equality but we doctrine of human equality, but we shall all concede that one man has as good a right to the truth as another. And it ought to go without saying that truth is truth, the same in one place truth is truth, the same in one place as another—in one pulpit as another. There is no such thing as Dutch algebra distinguished from English algebra, nor is there any such thing as Presbyterian truth distinguished from universal truth. Perhaps the machinery of written creeds deceive man. Perhaps a preacher comforts himself by saying that if a man comes into a Presbyterian church it is to hear the Presbyterian doctrine, and that the hearer takes it for granted that that pulpit will not go further than the Presbyterian standard. This will not do. It may excuse me, in conversa-Presbyterian standard. This will not do. It may excuse me, in conversation, from refraining to allude to the starvation in Libby prision, that I am talking to a reconstructed rebel officer. But when I am in the pulpit it is not etiquette that is at issue. I am there to say what is, and I must not stop short. The whole tangle of authoritative creeds is at the best, embarrassing. They lead a man, from their nature to try to continue in a belief which he try to continue in a belief which he once thought he had. They give a fossil form to what should be pliant, elastic and alive. But, no matter what they do elsewhere, when the preacher enters the pulpit he is free or he is nothing. He is there to say what he believes, not what he wishes to believe, er thinks it would be well to blieve. Then her delicate nose was held close to his mustache and she demanded of him where he she abuses her for being too fat or too thin, or mentions some social failing. There are plenty of other faults with which ladies accuse each other behind their backs, such as inhospitality, idleness, having "odd people" to stay with hem, frequently changing their servants, and even telling lies; but it is needless to multiply instances. Such accusations are all alike unkind and u just.

Prof. Maynard of Cincinnatt, it is alleged, owns the most powerful electric lattery in the world. He is also the fortunate proprietor of a black tom cat, unrivaled throughout the United States for beauty, size and inteligence. A few days since, so the story goes, these two belongings of the learned professor, each unique of its kind, came by chance into contact, in such sort that the cut became the recipient of a stream of electric fluid, estimated at one thousand horse-power. Forthwith his hair and horse-power. Forthwith his hal atool erect, emitting a brilliant cor-uncation of sparks. A series of heart-rending squalis, however, calling the prfessor's attention to his favorite's perprfessor's attention to his favorite's per-plexing situation, he promptly discon-nected the cat from the buttery; but to his surprise, found that it remaired luminous, having taken into the system such a tremendous does of electricity fluid that it had became a permanent generator of electricity, giving out a light equal to that of eight hundred wax candels. A single radiant cat, suspen-ded chandelier-wise from the ceiling of a theatre, would emit more light than a theatre, would emit more light than a hundred gas jets, or, enclosed within an ordinary street lamp would turn night into day for some five hundred yards from its crystal place of confinement. It would be a proud day for sience when electric cats shall revolutionize all the lightning systems of creation.

Bodies for Dissection.

Levision (Me.) Journal. In a free talk with a reporter, prominent physician and surgeon said:

The law of the state provides that each medical student, before he receives his degree of M D, shall dissect. Another law of the state provides that the body of no person shall be given up for dissection unless it be the body of a criminal who has suffered death by hanging and in that case, even if a desire is expressed by the condemned man, or his friends that his body be buried, his body can not be claimed for the dissection of the body can be claimed for the dissection. secting table. The last straw that the legislature piled on was when it abol-ished capital punishment, and made it absolutely impossible for us to get bodies for dissection in a legal way. The laws, for dissection in a legal way. The laws, as they now stand, encourage body-snatching. No man can become a practicing physician and surgeon until he has dissected, and the laws absolutely prohibit our getting bodies in a legal way. We can't legally bring bodies into the state from other states, as their laws prohibit it. Of course we must have bodies. We must rely on the generosity of friends in New York, who will send us bodies and run the risk of getting caught and paying the There are a great many mothers who, being sommolent, have overlaid their babes and smothered them. There are a good many preachers who do that for their hearers' souls. A man who cannot boil, cannot make any-body else boil.

All conceptions of religious infe that regard strong feeling as vulgar are an entire the results of the law. I can tell how many bodies are used for dissection in the course of a year. The Bowdoin school probably uses twenty-five bodies in a year; the Portland school ought to use about ten bodies; two years ago, when our Lewiston school was in operation.

many physicians who have a good deal of practice use one or two bodies a year. We've got to have bodies When a physician comes upon a rare disease he's obliged to post himself on a dead body in order to save a live one. The price of a body depends upon where you buy it. To get a body here costs us about $35. You buy them in New York for $5 apiece. The Maine medical association is taking steps in the matter and trying to make a way to seure bodies legally. Again, people don't consider the risks their doctors run in fitting themselves for their work. Every man who works over bodies run at the risk of being poisoned by the decaying flesh. Dr. Garcelon once caure near death from this cause. I was once sick six weeks from being poisoned from a body, and an Auburn physician has suffered in the same way Bowdoin college has paid the price of three of its professors to the cause of medical science. It is a startling fact, that quinine, arsenic and other poisonous minerals, form the basis of most of the "Fever and Ague Preparations," "Specifics," "Syrups," and "Tonics," in the market. The preparations made from these mineral poisons, although they are palatable, and may break the chill, do not cure, but leave the malarial and their own drug poison in the system, producing quinism, dizziness, ringing in the ears, headache, vertigo, and other disorders more formidable than the disease they were intended to cure.
